Secret Societies of all kinds tend in their very nature to become political organisations, and terribly of ignorance would not, however, cease at this powerful and dangerous ones they may become unless checked by the operation of sound laws and a strong Government. · China for many years there have existed all the conditions for the establishment of such organisations in their fullest vigour. The absence of any strong police or other means of maintaining order, and the consequent powerlessness of authority to deal with them, have favoured the despotism which they could exercise over their members, and has and from the date of its original publication enabled them to perfect the system of intimidation which they now know too well how to bring to bear upon those who are without their pale. What wonder that these Societies have grown into the worst examples in the local papers. THE FRENCH ASSEMBLY. (From the" Times' Parisian Correspondent.) VERSAILLES, May 14. MM. Jules Favre and Pouver-Quertier returned to Versuilles on Friday evening, and yesterday the Assembly was informed of the Treat which was signed at Frankfort on May 10. Jules Favre prefaced the reading of the Treaty ov some general observations of a nature to prepare the Assembly to listen with dignity, i not without agreew, to the barsh conditions imposed by the enemy. The Minister for-Foreign Affairs was obliged to admit that the efforts which had been made to procure a modification of the terms had been unsuccessful. He thereby allowed it to be known that such efforts had been made, and showed that if there had been a delay in the signature of the defini Live Treaty it was the fault of the French Go vernment—if it could be deemed a fault to make those efforts in extremis to obtain concessions

> THE ELECTORAL DISABILITIES OF WOMEN. (Times, May 5.)

The Bill for removing the Electoral Disabilities of Women has this year been met, so far as the vote of the House of Commons is concerned, with the prompt negative it deserves. Last year it achieved a temporary success on the Second Reading, probably because it was thought by the great majority of members to embody one of those propositions which scarcely call for the trouble of relutation. This accidental vote, however, was promptly reversed on the proposal to go into Committee, after Mr. Gladatone had expressed the "surprise and disappointment" with which he had heard of the Second Reading, and justly protested against the House being diverted from the numerous practical matters it had in hand to "auch an unsettling, not to say uprooting, cf the old landmarks of society" as the Bill invol ved. This session the advocates of common sense have come forward in time, and the Bill has been rejected by a large majority. The promoters of the Bill, however, will probably think themselves compensated for this defeat by the opinions expressed by influential persons in the course of the debate; and, in particular. they will no doubt consider the Prime Minisfor a adverse vote as more than neutralized by his favourable speech. This year Mr. Gladstone has none but objections of detail to arge against the measure. He thinks it ought to have a longer preamble, and he considers the Ballot a necessary preliminary to passing it; but he thinks Mr. Jacob Bright has made out a presumptive case in favour of a change in the law, and " if it should hereafter be found possible to arrive at a safe and well-adjusted

They would lose protection, peace, reverence, and submission, and would not gain security, power, or pleasure. If, as Mr. Gladstone says, the pressure of life among the lower orders frequently tends to mar the present relation of dependence between the bead of a family and his daughters, there is all the more reason for not adding to suc an injurious tendency by artificially encouraring female independence.
